

Elana Evan, PhD, is an Associate Professor in the UCLA Department of Pediatrics. She developed the UCLA Pediatric Palliative Care Program and is currently the Director of the Pediatric Palliative Care Research Program at UCLA. Her expertise involves treating children with various developmental disabilities, learning problems and functional difficulties associated with chronic pain as well as both serious and life-threatening medical conditions. Her research interests are in the area of pediatric palliative care, childhood communication, coping and cognitive ability. Dr. Evan is also a member of National Palliative Care Research Center (NPCRC) Scientific Review Committee.